In 1860, Prosper Maufoux, who was a notary by trade, left his practice to give his life over to his passion for wine. In 1970, his grandson, Pierre, brought Prosper Maufoux's headquarters to the main square in Santenay. Now at the winemaking helm is Eric Piffault, whose family's roots in Burgundian wine go back to 1898. Oenologist Nadine Gublin is now on board, overseeing the production of the house.

Domaine Vigne Au Roy Hautes Cotes de Nuit Blanc 2021

"Lush aromatics of Amarena cherry, rhubarb, white strawberry and green peppercorn draw in the nose. The palate offers soft tannins that elegantly frame notes of bing cherry, orange oil and white tea leaf flavors along the finish."

Domaine Vigne Au Roy Hautes Cotes de Nuit Rouge 2020

"At once ripe, with fresh sour-cherry fruit, the nose also has a touch of wet earth in the fall. Impressive depth for this humble appellation, the acidity riper than is often case here, the gentle tannins neatly interlocking with this. No hero, but a delightful wine that gives plenty of Burgundy character for a modest price. Sustainable. Drink now."

90pts James Suckling 05/22

"Originally a site for sparkling wine, this vineyard is now producing tart, berry-scented pinot noir. Grown in Bévy, in the hills above the Côte d'Or, the wine tastes a bit like a rustic Vosne-Romanée, the somewhat more famous village six miles to the east. Fruity and brisk, this would be refreshing with anything from grilled salmon to duck confit."
