Think of a daring new direction for Argentine wine and you will find that Chimango is already leading the way. This is seen not just in the choice of vineyards sites, such as the desert of Santa Rosa vineyards, but also in the championing of the modified parral system and experimentation with new types of irrigation, hail control and frost avoidance.

Why is Chimango different? Mindset. Sustainable, organic, dynamic, innovative – these are words used to describe a wine making team which considers the environment and people before producing any product.

Chimango is a line of five wines: (Cabernet Sauvignon, Malbec, Torrontés, Chardonnay, Tempranillo) produced from organically grown grapes in the high altitudes of Argentina's prime winegrowing region of Mendoza.

We have always believed that working with nature is the only way to produce wines of quality, character and appeal. The unique climate of Argentina, and the Mendoza region specifically, is beneficial to the wine production by allowing the harmonization with nature. All the components, such as dry climate, great temperature amplitude between day and night, high sun radiation, and low humidity have helped us produce healthy grapes under certified organic conditions. In addition, the low rainfall ensures a dry climate for the vines, allowing the control of diseases and pests to be done naturally without the use of fungicides and pesticides.
