CABEÇA DE TOIRO

An excellent microclimate (close to the Tagus River) and the quality of the soil contribute to the production of top-quality wines. The 96 hectares of vineyards (76 red grapes and 21 white grapes) are equipped with drip irrigation and are planted in vertical trellises. Vineyards are maintained according to an integrated production system, giving priority to ecological and certificated methods (soil conservation and biodiversity maintenance) that minimize the harmful side effects and the use of agro chemicals, in order to protect the environment and the human health. Quinta São João Batista is in the vicinity of the Natural Reserve of Paul of Boquilobo and is a sanctuary for the animals from this Reserve that choose it for nesting and habitation.

The expansive underground cellars accommodate one of the region's largest barrel capacities where wines age in an array of barrel types.

"A big, bold and juicy wine, this is rich with both tannins and black fruits. It is generous with its black-plum flavors, balanced acidity and a spice aftertaste from the wood aging. Drink the wine now."
