

After lengthy research in several regions of Chile, Bordeaux Wine Grower François Lurton planted his vineyard on virgin terroir, with poor soil and a healthy, balanced climate: the Lolol Valley. The choice of the Lolol Valley proved to be judicious, thanks to the weather conditions and the granite schist terroir. This touched subregion of the famous Colchagua Valley was perfect for implementing biodynamic winemaking methods and making remarkable wine.

HUMO BLANCO Organic Carmenere 2020

"The 2020 Humo Blanco Edición Limitada Carmenere doesn't have any added sulfites and shows perfectly clean, precise and delineated. It has a dark color and an expressive varietal nose with notes of freshly cracked peppercorns, cigar ash and tea and tobacco leaves. It has a medium body, moderate alcohol and round tannins. Really impressive. Drink 2021-2024."

Hacienda Araucano Alka Carmenere 2015

"Fully ripe aromas of animal hide and dark-berry fruits blend with heavy oak notes that are borderline chemical and like paint. A massive, extracted palate almost goes overboard but remains within the realm of balance. Flavors of clove, burnt oak and blackberry are dense, baked and outright woody on the finish. Drink through 2025."

"Blackberry and dark chocolate with hints of spice. Dried meat. Full body, juicy and layered. Wild wine. So much going on here. From biodynamically grown grapes. Drink now or hold."

96pts James Suckling 05/17

"Juicy, featuring well-framed flavors of dark fruits, spices and dried savory herbs. Zesty midpalate, with a finish that resonates with underbrush and mocha accents. Drink now through 2020."

2016 "This is a carmenere with real presence and intensity, yet it remains intact and tight with racy tannins and bright acidity. Lots of blackberry and blueberry character. Some fresh herbs and roses as well. Tangy and bright. Full-bodied, yet agile. Vivid finish. A top carmenere from Chile. Drink after 2022."

Gran Araucano Cabernet Sauvignon 2018

"Red plums, blackberries, dried herbs, chocolate and toasted nuts on the nose. It's full-bodied with firm, dusty tannins. Structured with concentrated, ripe dark fruit and spice. Flavorful finish with length. Drink or hold."

93pts James Suckling 03/21

"I was quite impressed by the nose of the 2018 Gran Araucano, a Cabernet Sauvignon from Colchagua, with a marked varietal and place character and quite restrained and balanced in this vintage. It has more balsamic flavors and plenty of tannins. It has stuffing to develop nicely in bottle."

92pts Wine Advocate 08/21

"The nose of this Cabernet gives way to red bell pepper, brick dust and baking spice aromas. A lush, deep and layered palate is jammy and thick, while flavors of peppery blackberry, fresh herbs and spicy oak arise. On the finish, coffee and mocha notes mix with ripe berry flavors. Drink through 2025."

Hacienda Araucano Clos de Lolol 2016

"Rather a dark, smoky nose with quite a bit of bitter chocolate. Quite a powerful dry wine with a serious tannin structure that has softened somewhat, but still isn't fully resolved. A little less might have been more. A blend of 41 per cent carmenere, 30 per cent syrah, 17 per cent cabernet sauvignon and 12 per cent cabernet franc. From biodynamically grown grapes. Demeter certified."
